

Nicole Jones to launch the Heavenly Huntsville Skies photography project, dedicated to those, living in passed, affected by cancer

On Monday October 13 at 5:30PM, Huntsville business leader Nicole Jones will launch Heavenly Huntsville Skies, an inspirational photography series dedicated to those, living and passed, affected by cancer.

Many factors led Jones to choose HudsonAlpha Institute for Biotechnology as the beneficiary of this project, namely because of their tenacity in the field of cancer research.

"HudsonAlpha is the epitome of what economic development and nonprofit organizations are all about. The field of biotechnology is integral to our local economy, and some of the most brilliant minds in the world are collaborating here in Huntsville to hopefully discover a cure for the benefit of humanity. I am beyond impressed with what I have witnessed so far and look forward to partnering with HudsonAlpha for years to come," exclaims Jones.

The series will feature breathtaking skies with distinct color variations, most of which Jones photographed in Huntsville in September of 2014.

Nicole Jones invites the community to celebrate at the Emma's Tea Room Building located at 401 Pratt Avenue beginning at 5:30PM. The evening will commence with a presentation and ribbon cutting ceremony hosted by the Chamber of Commerce of Huntsville/Madison County, followed by live music, food, and door prizes until 7:30PM. Several local leaders within business, government, and civic organizations have contributed to this effort. As always, the Nicole Jones Development Annual Downtown Gathering is free for friends in and around Huntsville.
